Fish in a Tree, by Lynda Mullaly Hunt, is an emotionally charged story that captures the ups and downs of school, friendships, and the search for identity experienced by tweens. Sixth grader Ally Nickerson has always dreaded school. She’s been called “dumb” and “loser” by her fellow students and considered a troublemaker by her teachers. She’s great at math and art but she’s never let anyone know her darkest secret: She can’t read. Everything changes when she gets a new teacher, Mr. Daniels, and befriends two other misfits at school, Keisha and Albert. Mr. D realizes that Ally has dyslexia and helps her learn to read and see the value of her creative mind. Her new friends help her realize there’s a lot more to people than first meets the eye. This is an emotional and uplifting story about celebrating the uniqueness in everyone. Fish in a Tree is one of those brilliant books that leaves us better than it found us — with greater empathy and a larger appreciation of ourselves and others. Join the club to read, discuss, and create around the themes presented in Fish in a Tree.

This course will look at how various aspects of history are portrayed in films and contrast that with “how it really was.” Both the filmmaker and historian share common characteristics. They study appropriate sources, then select and arrange facts to tell their story. It is the historian’s task to separate fantasy from fact. A major goal of this course is to determine what is valid in contemporary films and historical dramas. In addition, the course will touch on the history of Hollywood and the motion picture industry itself and examine, from time to time, the changes in film technology, techniques, and in the “politics” of the business. Permission Slip required to view certain films.

History of American Sports-This course will consider the development and significance of sports (professional and amateur) throughout American history. This will include studying the issues of race/gender and the intersection of sports with major US events as well as the effect of sport on our lives as a form of culture. Topics addressed will include the origin of American sports (i.e. baseball, college sports, boxing), themes (i.e. race, gender, sexuality issues), modern issues (i.e. gambling, commercialization, globalization, politicization, youth sports), and the collision of historical events and sports (i.e. the Gilded Age, World War I, the Great Depression, World War II, Vietnam, and 9/11).

Famous American Women-A course which explores the contributions, achievements, and barriers women faced from early colonization through modern day. Some of the topics covered will include life in the New World, republican motherhood, slavery, the abolition movement, women’s suffrage, temperance, and worker’s rights movements. Students will learn the historical/social impact of cultural icons such as the flapper, Rosie the Riveter, Sandra Day O’Connor, etc. We also will study the women’s movement of the 1960s and 70s, Roe vs. Wade, Title IX, and other notable legislation and events of the period. This is a class for those interested in social/cultural history and who are also curious about the path of the women’s movement in the United States.

World War II. This course will cover the causes, events, and lasting effects of World War II on the world. We will look at military, political, and social events connected to the war. Students will initially learn about and practice structured extemporaneous speeches with emphasis on verbal and nonverbal delivery skills (organization, projection, inflection, eye-contact, hand gestures, and more). Students will then build a foundation for effective argumentation and advocacy (claim/warrant/evidence) by participating in debates and ultimately presenting one research-based persuasive speech. Special emphasis will be placed on critical thinking and listening skills as well as argument resolution. This class is ultimately for students who want to explore debate in a noncompetitive environment but may choose to participate in the debate team next school year or later in their high school experience.
